

Covid-19 will play havoc with RIWPS' educational programs for the foreseeable future. Not to be defeated, we seek your help to create a way to sustain ourselves - and support one another.

RIWPS' members are invited - no urged, really - to submit short accounts of personal, plant-based adventures and observations in these trying times to the RIWPS blog.

We know you are out walking and gardening while following the rules for social distancing and would like to hear what you are seeing and doing.

How it works:

--- Please write about 250 words on anything that strikes your fancy or would interest the RIWPS community. What's blooming now and where? What landscape projects are you undertaking with all your newly freed-up time? Have any birds or pollinators attracted your interest?

--- Email a Word or Pages file or a Google doc to blog@riwps.org. Attach (please don't embed them in your email) a few photos, say no more than 4.

--- Then check the website (www.riwps.org) to see your posted essay. Be sure to subscribe on the blog page so that you'll be notified when others post something new. Invite all your plant loving friends to subscribe as well!
